

Acknowledgments

Many people contributed to the realization of this work in different contexts and ways, and we would like to express our gratitude to them. We are grateful to first mention the two main institutions, which allowed us to publish the present correspondence — the Accademia dei Lincei in Rome and the Mittag-Leffler Institute in Djursholm near Stockholm. Moreover, the Institute welcomed us for two periods of study in the Summers 2017 and 2018 in order to complete the book, and we were thus able to take advantage of the exceptional working conditions it provides to its visitors. We want especially to warmly thank Mikael Rågstedt, the librarian of the Institute, who has facilitated our stay at the Institute in all possible ways. We express our thanks to the Nobel Foundation, the Kungliga Bibliotek of Stockholm, and the Archivio della Scuola Normale Superiore in Pisa for providing us with documents and letters, and to the Volterra family for permission to publish some photographs of their property. We thank our colleagues Ciro Ciliberto and Manfred Karbe for their longstanding interest in the project. Of course, the support of the European Mathematical Society and its proposal to welcome the book among its publications were essential to encourage us to lead the project to the end. Thomas Hintermann, who oversees the policy of the European Mathematical Society Publishing House, has been always efficient and responsive, and it is a great pleasure for us to mention his role in this story. It also our pleasure to thank Nicole Bloye for her huge work in editing the English language. We want also to mention the help provided by Hans Ellegren, Alessandra Fiocca, Åse Frid, and Jesper Lützen in various ways. Last but not least, we must express our most heartfelt gratitude to our colleague and friend Pietro Nastasi who had been years ago the initiator of this enterprise, to which he devolved great enthusiasm and energy. His original drafts gave us a good starting impulse and we are glad to associate him with the present book.

Barcelona–Lille–Paris, April 2019

Frédéric Jaëck, Laurent Mazliak, Emma Sallent Del Colombo, Rossana Tazzioli